Uncivilized: A Journal of Feral Living

UNCIVILIZED: A journal of feral living

...A magazine created for the exploration and cross-pollination of practical, critical and visionary words and images, taking aim at Civilization in its totality, and celebrating the rawness and realness found on the journey away from it.

DEADLINE : OCTOBER 15

Submissions of articles, rants, poems, stories, original graphics and photos, and any other stabs at the transcription of direct experience are invited, as well as free classified ads and resource listings. Also, we'd like book and other media reviews, and reprints and suggestions of favorite excerpts from books or articles.

Here's a list of topics we'd like to see explored:

-earth-based skills (hide tanning and buskskin sewing, shelter-building, herbal wildcrafting, wild foods)
-Radical communication and ecopsychology
-mental health and Civilization
-Attachment parenting, raising feral kids, midwifery, etc
-diet and nutrition
-sexuality, polyamory, etc
-primitive skills gatherings
-rejecting symbolic thought/critique of language
-anarcho-herbalism
-personal rewilding experiences and reflections
-interspecies communication
-anthropology: limits and benefits
-starting 'tribal' land collectives
-cultural appropriation
-beyond agriculture: theory and practice
-ecofeminism, gender
-moralism, nihilism, activism
-rewilding cities/urban foraging

Classified ads should remain under 100 words, and limited to announcements of projects and events, appeals for collaboration, bartering and trading, and DIY "commerce" like self-published zines & books, music, and crafts.

Submissions (preferably on a CD/disk or via email as a word document, but snail mail will work too) can be sent to:
